the Pontifical directions and with the teaching of St. Thomas recommended by our venerated predecessor so often, and by us in the Apostolic Letter of the 23d January, 1904. Let the Bishops, then, exercise the most scrupulous vigilance over the masters in their doctrines, recalling to a sense of duty those who run after certain dangerous novelties and removing, without any regard, from the office of teaching all who do not profit by the warnings received. Frequentation of the universities is not to be permitted to young clerics except for very grave reasons and with the greatest precautions on the part of the Bishops. Seminary students are to be absolutely forbidden to take part in any way in outside agitations, and we accordingly prohibit them from reading papers and periodicals except, in the case of the latter, some of sound principles that the Bishop may deem suitable for study by the students. Let discipline be ever maintained with increasing vigor and vigilance. Lastly, there must be in every seminary the spiritual director, a man of more than ordinary prudence and experienced in the ways of Christian perfection, who is, with indefatigable zeal, to train the youth in that solid piety which is the first foundation of the spiritual life. These rules, Venerable Brethren, where conscientiously and firmly followed, will afford you a sure guarantee of seeing growing up around you a clergy that will be your joy and your crown.

Otherwise the disorder of insubordination and independence, which we now lament, will go a good deal further in some of the young clergy and cause much greater harm, because there are not wanting those who are so much a prey to this reprobate spirit that, abusing the sacred office of preaching, they openly act as its promoters and apostles to the ruin and scandal of the faithful.

Our predecessor on the 31st July, 1894, through the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, drew the attention of the Ordina- the Pharaohs who had been removed slept in peace until our own regulations laid down in this Pontifical document, laying an obligation in this respect on the consciences of the Bishops, so that the words of the Prophet Nahum may never be applicable to any of them: "Thy shepherds have slumbered" (iii., 18). No one can have power to preach "unless he first be approved of in life, knowledge and morals " (Conc. Trid. Sess. V., cap. 2, "De Refor."). Priests from other dioceses should not be admitted to preach without letters of testimony from their own Bishop. Let the subject of their sermons be that indicated by the Divine Redeemer when He said: "Preach the Gospel" (Mark xvi., 15), "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you" (Mark xxviii., 20). Or, according to the comment of the Council of Trent, "announcing to them the vices they should avoid and the virtues they should follow
