

The General Reader's Visual Dictionary

A Visual Survey of the Roman Sanctuary

General-reader priestly-review edition

PRIESTLY REVIEW COPY — NOT FOR PUBLIC RELIANCE

Monochrome portrait review packet

Review status

PRIESTLY REVIEW COPY — NOT FOR PUBLIC RELIANCE. Prepared for priestly liturgical and ceremonial review. It contains identified review questions and may contain unresolved terminology, morphology, variants, or artwork. It is not an official liturgical book, parish direction, evidence of authorization, or a public reference edition. This packet deliberately includes source-audited records and candidate artwork that have not passed the authoritative-publication gate. It is incomplete, provisional, and unsuitable for training, public reliance, or a claim of Roman completeness.

How to read this concise review selection

This packet asks whether a small group of familiar sanctuary objects can orient an adult non-specialist without turning one pictured form into a Roman norm. It is a review sample, not a miniature comprehensive dictionary.

What is admitted. The entries below are limited to canonical records whose identity and 1962-horizon use have reached the source-audited gate and whose candidate artwork is admitted for this bounded review. The drawings remain under review. A pictured material, ornament, proportion, or arrangement is representative only unless the entry expressly binds it to a source.

How to read the marks. Universal Roman describes the recorded liturgical status, not the universality of the pictured decorative form. ARTWORK UNDER REVIEW means that the drawing is being tested for recognition and physical plausibility; it is not an approval mark. Evidence caveats identify claim types that still require correction or a more exact visual treatment.

What this sample does not yet cover. It contains no sanctuary orientation composition, linens, vestments, pontifical insignia, historical objects, substantive-variant comparisons, symbolism entries, or completed indexes. Those omissions prevent this packet from answering what a complete Roman sanctuary contained at the 1962 horizon. Deliberate exclusion does not mean that an omitted object or form is unimportant, non-Roman, or obsolete.

Review the entries first for immediate recognition and purpose. Then ask whether a non-specialist could mistake the illustrated form for the only permitted form, confuse the chalice with the paten, or confuse an altar candle with its candlestick. Record corrections by stable object ID and page.

Each entry prints its current workflow, artwork, and claim-evidence states. Those labels are caveats, not approvals.

Explicit Omission Register

This generated register names records excluded from this review view. It does not prove that the canonical inventory itself is exhaustive.

- Audience-layer omissions: no source-bound symbolism or historical relationship is yet eligible, although those are defining concerns of the general-reader edition.

Questions for Priestly Review

Please annotate the object, variant, artwork, plate, and page IDs for every correction. Distinguish an observed defect from local preference.

1. Is each object correctly identified in English and Latin? Record any ambiguous or period-dependent term.
2. Does the stated status match the cited 1962-horizon source?
3. Is each object placed in the correct ritual, ministerial, and historical context?
4. Does each drawing show physically possible construction, folds, parts, orientation, scale, and manner of use?
5. Are substantive variants represented and named correctly?
6. Could the intended reader confuse this object with another? What comparison or inset would prevent that confusion?
7. Are handler, handoff, preparation, disposition, and “do not handle” statements accurate for this audience?
8. Does any composition imply an impossible state, wrong minister, unsafe route, or local arrangement presented as universal?
9. Is symbolism supported, proportionate, and distinct from rubric and function? Does the concise selection explain identity, purpose, brief symbolism, and history without oversimplifying status or period?
10. Which pages did you review at full size and in print, and which questions were outside your competence or remain unresolved?

Review Snapshot and Open Gates

PRIESTLY REVIEW COPY — NOT FOR PUBLIC RELIANCE.

Snapshot identity: general-reader at the generation timestamp below. The eligible record IDs are the IDs printed in this packet; the omission register identifies excluded records. Source collation, complete inventory, independent priestly review, artwork review, actual-size print review, rights review, and authoritative-release approval remain open. The detached production and public-distribution manifests bind this snapshot identity to the exact installed PDF SHA-256. A reviewer must state separately whether source claims, artwork, full-size printed pages, or only a subset were examined.

Pronunciation Reference

Commonly spoken Latin headwords will be selected only after the inventory and terminology audit are complete.

English–Latin and Latin–English Indexes

Index entries will be generated from the canonical reviewed inventory.

Visual Index

Plate and figure references will be generated from the reviewed plate manifest.

Variant and Terminology Notes

Source-qualified notes will distinguish universal Roman use, authorized or regional variants, religious-community use, and historical examples.

Scope and Qualifications

The declared completeness boundary, rights state, and review qualifications will remain explicit until every production gate closes.

Numbered Source Notes and References

Entry-keyed source notes and the reviewed reference list will be generated from canonical bindings after claim-level verification.
